The New Princesse Costume_Basques and Overskirts Still Worn-New Colors and New Materials - School-Dresses for Girls-Fall Hats and Trimmings.

[special Correspondence of the Dispatch.] NEW YORK, September 9, 1875.

Fortunately for people with slim purses the styles for dress-making change but owly, and anything strikingly new require time to win its way into popular fa-. Therefore, though Worth and other etters of the fashion are making an effort to troduce the Princesse costume as the mode skirls will still be worn, and many bandsome its are imported, made in that shape. this Princesse costume, of which we hear so such among modistes, is merely a modificaon of the well known Gabrielle, with waist and skirt cut in one, the front elaborately trimmed en tablier, and the fullness al passed in large box-pleats behind.

For evening dresses there are low-necked Princesse overskirts, and for street-wear the meesse wrap-a sort of polonaise, closely resembling the ba-quines worn several years ago. It is too early to predict its success or failure. Probably next year it may be the rage-now, conservative people cling to the basque and overskirt, with sacque for the

There are many different basques, but the favorite is the well-known cuirass. It is longer than heretofore, and comes down well over the hips. Suits of two colors or shades are still ersed the order in making up plaids. The lower skirt and sleeves on imported suits are now of the plaid; the curiass and overskirt of the plain material.

Plaid flounces are out straight, and are them, top and bottom. Overskirts and basques, when of plaids, are usually cut on Stripes are largely imported, and the side-pleatings are used on these suits they are always out bias.

Double-breasted basques are occasionally seen, and button diagonally across the front. Bows and buttons are equally worn, and at present it is hard to tell which will be

NEW COLORS AND MATERIALS.

In colors, this season, brown takes precedence, next comes gray, then blue so dark as to be almost black, violet, garnet, and a dark maroon. These last two shades are used, as street-suits, only for misses and

There is a decided fancy for simplicity in trimming those intended for street-wear. The lower skirt has a deep-gathered flounce, deed and headed by knife-pleating, or else The square overskirt is simply hemmed, and the curiass bisque edged by a piping. The easie fancy obtains in cashmeres and other handsome worlen suits.

A flat pleating of silk extends from the waist to the edge of the long apron overskirt. The dress is drawn back too tightly to admit of such an unladylike proceeding as romping, and is finished by a broad brown ribbon sash. Brown agate buttons close the basque; and the price of the suit for a miss of feurteen is forty five dol-

Simpler dresses are of serge with a single deep plaid flounce on the lower skirt. This and the sleeves are of solid brown. The plain cuiras, and long, round overskirt are of shaded brown plaid, and have only a piping on the one, and a plain hem on the other. The overskirt is draped by shirring old cemetery, where the forefathers of the on the hips, and is also shirred down the centre of the front. The same style is seen in gray and in blue. The material may, of course, be chosen to suit the purse of the wearer. Warmly-lined secoues to match the suit are worn with these, or else a French sacque of thick cloth trimmed with Titan

Misses' waterproofs are long sacques of dark blue or brown, made with close sleeves drawn at the band by elastic, and with cape The bat is the togue, trimmed with a long grenadine scarf, to be wound around the neck, and with a wing set in on the left side. Straws are preferred now, but prudent mothers purchase felts, which may be worn all the winter. High rubber boots, for wading through slush and snow, will appear a few

FALL MILLINERY.

Bonnets vary but little in shape from those already worn. There is one with a soft crown, called the Zanzibar, in honor of the Sultan; and another, which may be reversed them bave strings, and are worn very far back on the head. In hats, the toque, the slouch (much like a gentleman's), and the round hat, divide favor. Later, it is said, urbans will be introduced.

New hat- and bonnet-ribbons are very wide-almost scarfs, in fact. Feathers are a furore; and feathers of all sorts. Birds, from the pigeon to the humming-bird; wings, plumes, bands, ostrich tips, and aigrettes all appear. One new bonnet, from Virot (the great French milliner), has six wings on each side; another has one pair à la Mercuré that is, stuck in at the back like the wings in Mercury's cap.

Ostrich plumes are merely fastened where the end is stuck in, and left to wave at their own sweet will.

The Montagnard hat is something like the brigand and Ruben's shapes of last season, and has usually a long plume stuck low in the back of the hat, and hanging nearly to the wais'. Gold and silver braid is much used, and gold- and silver-gilt ornaments have taken the place of jet. Even cashmere lace is a novelty, which is largely used on Parisian bonnets. It is a tine woollen lace, of the creamy tint so popular for some months past, and comes in ips, and caught together at the back | thread-lace patterns. As a dress-trimming it promises to be much liked.

Flowers are now arranged in touffes; that breadth of tulle or gauze is so pretty when is to say, they are crushed in a cluster into the centre of a bow or rosette of long loops of velvet or ribbon.

Linen collars and cuffs, hemstitched, are in fashion. Ladies fond of needle-work hemern cashmere (of which more anon) - which stitch for themselves dainty ruffles of linen-Is tait to be popular. PLEASANT EXPERIENCES OF A BOSTON ENIGHT TEMPLAR IN VIRGINIA-HIS RECEPTION AND ENTERTAINMENT IN RICHMOND.

[From the Boston Globe.] Mr. Editor : Sir,-Permit an errant Knight of De Molay and a wanderer from Boston to relate a few of his experiences in this beautiful city while on a brief trip for pleasure gathered. Pleatings of the plain goods edge and recreation. I left Boston for Richmond, as my objective point, for a quiet tour of observation in Virginia, and without any expectation of even being recognized, much less besieged, by a single person in this disstripes are broken and irregular. When tant quarter. You may, therefore, imagine my consternation when I found myself, the moment I touched the soil of the Old Dominion, the object of special attention on the part of almost every one I met. I was at a loss for some time how to account for this, and for a time thought the people might have mistaken me for General Grant, Ben. Butler, Sergeant Bates, Eli Perkins, or Susan B.

Tanner, and Sir Knight O. M. Marshall, who took me quite by surprise. These gentlemen, whom I at once recognized as having been among the guests of the De Molay Commandery at the Bunker Hill Centennial, proceeded to inform me, very unceremoniously, that they had come to take charge of my person and see that I suffered no detriment during my sojourn in the capital of the late Confederacy. They explained that this was an absolute necessity by the situation, because I was a stranger, and therefore they took year; they are more durable, and pay better me in, &c. I concluded resistance would be in vain, and surrendered, like Lee at Appomattox, to "overpowering numbers." I of course expected to be paroled, but soon learned that I was to be kept a close prisoner and held as a hostage for the good behavior here or four pleatings, one above the other. of De Meday Commandery. Prison-life is of course irksome, and although I was the same day conducted to the Libby, and had no chance of escape, I found my captors a most genial and elever set of whole-souled rebels. who, while they kept a strict watch upon me, did not for a moment restrict my liberty of speech or fetter my free actions.

HONORS TO THE REPRESENTATIVE OF MASONRY

But, to be more serious, you feel that it is almost a sacrilege, in view of the splendid manner in which we have been received, and feted by our brother Sir Kn ights of this city, to indulge in badinege of this sort, especially as it was not to me I ersonally these popors were paid, but to De Molay Commandery and the Templarst of Boston, through me, their bumble re presentative. INDICATIONS OF THRIFT AND PROSPERITY. Leaving these monuments of the past, we next visited all points of interest in and about the city. The almshouse, a fine building, is situated in the outskirts near a grand city sleep their last sleep. I was gratified to see the cleanliness and good order which distinguishes it throughout, and speaks volumes for the superintendent, Captain C. P. Bigger, whose pleasant face was a true index to his humanity. After passing the mansion of Jefferson Davis and the venerable Capitol, admiring the Washington monument, which is one of the most beautiful groups of colossal statuary that I have ever seen, either in this counand hood lined with bright-colored flannel. try or in Europe; taking a look at Castle for sale. Thunder and Libby Prison; visiting a large tobacco-factory, in which I heard some fine singing by an immense choir of negroes while at their work, and viewing a large number of commodious and elegant brick school-houses for both white and colored children, we visited the gas-works, and saw a new gasometer, which, we were informed, had but recently been put up to supply the increasing demands made by the rapid kins. growth of the city. The gasometer and its supporting columns, I learned, were the work of Emineut Commander Tanuer, who is one of the most extensive iron manufacturers in the city, as well as one of her mos popular and enterprising citizens. I am glad to see that he is to be run by his fellowcitizens for the State Senate, against his own wishes, and everybody tells me that his elecand worn with the back in front. All of tion is a toregone conclusion; and I cannot doubt it, for he seems to enjoy the universal love and confidence of the community.

A GRAND BANQUET TO THE VISITING RNIGHT. But I must come to a close. A grand ban quet was given at Snellings's cafe last Wednesday night in bonor of your humble representative. There were present about wenty-five of the Richmond Templars, including many of the most distinguished among whom I may mention ex-Governo Sir Knight Gilbert C. Walker, Grand Commander William B. Isaacs; Eminent Commander Tanner, who presided; Sir Knight Colonel Thomas J. Evans, whom you will al remember. The table was elegantly spread, and I have rarely seen or partaken of a bill of rarer delicacies. Toasts were drunk and peeches made, all breathing a spirit of the kindest, most friendly, and fraternal feeling or the people and Sir Knights of Boston. The festivities, fun, and frolic were kept up until the small hours. I was still held prisoner by my captors, who fed me as the ravens did Elijah, only on rather a better diet. Mr. Editor, were I to write pages I P. Rady, R. M. Manly, Alfred R. Courtney upon me so many acts of kindness; the impression made will be as lasting as life itself. I can never forget the attention and the generous hospitality of the Knights and people of Richmond, and it will ever remain one of the most cherished memories of my life. I am delighted with the Virginians; their frank, candid manners, and easy, carcless bearing. The men are good, whole-souled fellows, very like our own people, while the beauty and grace of their women is no idle boast. Of course, in a land so rich in Masonie tradition and coand revolutionary lore, could not fail to be interested by all I saw and heard. A new chapter of American history was opened, and surprised me at every turn; and I leave this city, which has become very dear to me, more convinced than ever that Virginia and Massachusetts are bound together for the future by no common ties, and are in full sympathy now, as they were in the distant past, whilst Richmond and Boston are inseparable friends for evermore.
